Students, employees embrace new facility

USI’s staff architect and construction manager added a new job to his resume September 2, when fall classes began on campus: traffic officer in the Science Center expansion and new Education Center.

“It’s huge. With so many twists and turns to get through, it’s easy to get disoriented,” explained Fred Kalvelage, who dedicated time to helping students maneuver the halls opening day. “There were a lot with that glazed look.”

Dazed students aside, Kalvelage had only a few minor glitches to report and characterized the facility’s first day of service as a success.

“Based on everything I’ve ever done in my 40 years of experience, I’d say this is the smoothest I’ve ever seen a building open,” he said. “I heard a lot of positive comments from students and faculty about the quality of the facility and the general appearance of the facility.”

Construction of the immense brick and glass structure began two years ago and is now essentially complete. With more than 150,000 square feet, the three-level $23.1 million facility is comprised of two wings and is the largest building on campus.

The Science Center expansion, called the Torrington Science Wing, joins the northwest side of the original Science Center and provides additional space for the Pott School of Science and Engineering. The Education Wing connects to the Torrington Science Wing and is home to the Bower-Suhreinich School of Education and Human Services, Department of Teacher Education, University Division, and Academic Skills.

To minimize confusion, Kalvelage said a new room-numbering system, incorporating the original Science Center, has been implemented. The room numbers have four digits with the first digit designating the floor. The second indicates which wing: “1” for the Education Wing and “2” for the Science Wing. The last two digits are the room number. Room 3104, for example, is located on the third floor of the Education Wing.

Crammed in its previous quarters, the Department of Teacher Education now boasts a seminar room, technology-enhanced classrooms, and a Professional Development Center as well as adequate storage.

“It’s excellent. I’m just really impressed with how the ideas we had were put into plans and put into reality, said Dr. Charles Price, chair of the Department of Teacher Education. “We’re really excited about what it’s going to mean for our program.”

In addition to classrooms and other amenities, the two new wings house research laboratories, offices, computer labs, a tutoring arena, a rooftop greenhouse, three stair towers, an OSHA-compliant chemical storeroom, an atrium, the 150-seat Couch/Renner Lecture Hall, and two indoor wells for groundwater monitoring.

Paul Inkenbrandt, a junior geology major who helped move equipment into the new building during the summer, is excited about the amount of space the Pott School of Science and Engineering has gained and is looking forward to utilizing the new reading room and the indoor wells.

“It’s a nice building with a whole bunch more space, and new equipment is coming in with the building,” he said. “The rooms are more suited to what we do, what we study.”

The scope of the facility is viewed as a huge boon by many of its new occupants.

“Everything doesn’t seem so crowded,” enthused Debbie Whiteside, administrative assistant in University Division. “One good thing is I’m going to lose weight walking up and down the halls.”

The University community is invited to attend a ceremony celebrating the public opening of the Science Center expansion and new Education Center from 1 to 3 p.m. October 12.

Project e-AGLE takes flight

Monday, September 15, USI freshmen and their parents will be introduced to a revolutionary new program called Project e-AGLE (electronic advice for a great learning experience).

The project is a collaborative effort of Academic Affairs, Student Affairs, Business Affairs, USI Foundation, and GoalQuest, a strategic enrollment management company. It is focused on improving the retention rates of first-year students. The project has been made possible, in part, by a grant from Lumina Foundation for Education Inc.

The programs comprising Project e-AGLE target students and their parents with a Web-based e-mail messaging system that deploys “mini ‘flying’ lessons” on a variety of topics, such as high school-to-college transitioning, academic skills development, working effectively with faculty, risk behavior and social norms, and campus involvement.

The project is designed to increase freshman student retention by delivering reinforcement of critical retention information to students and their parents in the privacy of their own dorm/home/computer.

“In the past, we’ve attempted to implement a number of Web and e-mail based strategies: mass e-mail, portals, and so forth. These have proven to be relatively passive tools,” said Dr. Charles Harrington, assistant vice president for Academic Affairs. “With Project e-AGLE, we can send tailored messages to students and their parents, including links to our many resources as well as the USI Web site.”

“We are very impressed with GoalQuest’s suite of Web-based tools that communicate with and track students throughout the freshman year and beyond,” added John Deem, associate vice president for Student Affairs.

“GoalQuest is a proven and powerful tool that when used regularly by our students and their parents will be a tremendous support resource with which to monitor and gain insight into their transition to college. To supplement our institutional research activities, it could reveal how our students are coping and adapting to campus life.”

Organizers believe these topics will be of interest to faculty and staff, and should supplement and reinforce what is being done in the classroom and in support programming. To this end, the Center for Teaching and Learning Excellence is hosting two "Webinars" to preview the software to faculty and staff, who are encouraged to attend one of the workshops.

Campus snapshot: Counseling Center

From relationship troubles and problems with roommates to more serious issues such as eating disorders and problems with alcohol, employees in the USI Counseling Center are ready to help.

Students taking at least one class are eligible to receive counseling at the center. Whether concerned about themselves or someone else, students are welcome to walk in and speak with a counselor. Counselors encourage students to make an appointment, but it’s not always necessary.

“If students make an appointment, they are admitting there is a problem,” said Jim Browning, center director. “And sometimes they don’t want to admit there is a problem.”

Each year counselors from the center visit classes - freshmen classes especially - to inform students of the services available. Some of those services include couples counseling and mediation between groups that can’t seem to solve problems on their own.

Assistant Director Leslie Smith’s main focus is students with disabilities. She seeks accommodations in classrooms and finds testing rooms for students with special needs.

Additionally, Smith locates students who are paid to read and take notes for others who need the extra help. She also acts as an advocate for students while working with instructors.

Fifteen years ago, only 10 to 15 students with disabilities were on campus. That number has grown to nearly 300.

“I want to emphasize to all students that we are a good resource for getting help,” Smith said.

Counselor Mary Beth Weber is a clinical social worker who assists students with emotional or personal problems as well as problems with drugs or alcohol. She also is working on a Sexual Assault Task Force to create a Peer Awareness/Education Program in an effort to help raise awareness.

Weber said mid-semester is when a number of students show up in the Counseling Center because of relationship problems or because they suddenly become overwhelmed, realizing they haven’t spent enough time studying.

She wants students to think of the counselors as advocates and confidants if they need someone to talk to or help with problems they are having.

Student appointed to USI Board

Sam Tucker, a chemistry and business major, was appointed student representative to the USI Board of Trustees in August. His two-year appointment by Gov. Frank O’Bannon was effective immediately.

“Sam provides other students with a wonderful example of combining an enthusiasm for the study of chemistry with a desire to excel in other areas,” said Dr. Marie Hankins, chair of the Chemistry Department.

“His is not only an excellent chemistry student but has broadened his background by studying abroad. His interest in Student Government was a springboard for this appointment to the Board. I look forward to great things from Sam in the future.”

An Evansville resident, Tucker is a graduate of Reitz High School. The National Merit Scholar Semi-finalist is attending USI as a Presidential Scholar. He serves as vice president of the Student Government Association, plays on the tennis team, and is a member of the Geology Club, the Policy Review Committee, and the Student Chapter of the American Chemical Society.

Tucker is regularly on the dean’s list. He is the son of Bill and Mary Tucker of Evansville.

A student considered for the trustee position must be full-time with a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.5, a resident of Indiana, and a U.S. citizen, who has completed two semesters at USI.

Tucker applied for the position because he wants to give something back to USI.

“I’ve been given a good opportunity for postsecondary education at USI, and I want to be part of the future decisions and endeavors of the University,” he said. “I think I can represent the students well because of my involvement in student activities.”

Area organizations collaborate for safety

The Tri-State Industrial Safety Council recently was formed to promote a cost effective, safe work environment for both owner organizations and contractor employees.

Current owner members include Alcan, Alcoa, American Discussion Forums to Develop and Maintain Community Building Skills in Health Administration Education," at the annual meeting of the Association of Universities with Programs in Health Administration in June in Nashville, Tenn. He also was selected chair of the association's Ethics Faculty Forum 2004-06.

Elliot Wasserman, associate professor of theatre, directed a production of Rodgers and Hammerstein's The Sound of Music in August in Dallas/Fort Worth at the Bass Performance Hall, a venue that seats more than 2,200 and hosts first national tours and major concerts. According to a reviewer, "Wasserman prepared the entire cast, right down to the tiniest von Trapp child, so well that this production seemed to be hitting on all cylinders even on opening night."

Foundation news

Ronald D. Romain '73, president of United Leasing, is the first USI graduate to chair the 68-member USI Foundation Board of Directors. He assumed office July 1. A former board secretary, Romain has been a Foundation Board member since 1994. He and his wife Connie '74 co-chaired the successful Alumni Division for Campaign USI, the University's first capital campaign. During the past year, the couple co-chaired the Alumni Major Gifts Committee for The Challenge for Academic Excellence. Romain also has served on the School of Business Board of Visitors for 11 years.

Elected to serve with Romain are Doris Halwes, vice chair for development; Nancy Hartley Gaunt, vice chair for planning; and Robert Goocher, treasurer. Other officers include Donita F. Wolf '83, president of the USI Alumni Association, who serves as vice chair for alumni. Dr. Marie Bussing-Burks continues as secretary. Dr. Robert Ruble, the University's vice president for Business Affairs and treasurer, assumes the duties of a former board secretary.

New directors elected for three-year terms are Ed Brundick, a physician with Orthopaedic Associates; Sharon Hafer, community volunteer; Dan Hermann '79, president, Black Beauty Coal Co.; and Andy Hubbard, MBA '98, vice president and treasurer of Evansville Sheet Metal Works. Jonathan Delong, assistant general manager for production control at Toyota, was elected to fill a two-year unexpired term.

A annual appointments by USI president Ray Hoops to the Foundation Board include Dr. R. Eugene Klippel, dean, School of Business, representing the deans; and Dr. Charles Price, chair, Teacher Education Department, representing the faculty. Jamie L. Wicks '91, MBA '97, president-elect of the USI Alumni Association, also joins the board for a three-year term. Pat O'Daniel was elected to the board's Advisory Council.

In memoriam

A member of the USI Foundation Board, Sara Beth Davies, 65, Evansville, died Aug. 20 following a long battle with breast cancer.

Executive director of Leadership Evansville for 23 years, Davies' work with the organization resulted in many collaborative efforts with the university. She was a former M.A.L.S. student and worked with the Komen Race For The Cure, for court reform, and as an environmentalist.

Survivors include her husband of 28 years, Robert A. Davies; daughters, Beth Huff Franklin, Lynn Miller Pease, Kristen Haynie, Ann E. Davies, and Jane E. Cook; sons, J. Paul Organ and David K. Davies; and 15 grandchildren.

Services were held Aug. 23 at First Presbyterian Church. Memorial contributions may be made to the Sara B. Davies Scholarship Fund, Leadership Evansville, 1007 Parrett St., Evansville, IN 47713 or to the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation, 3700 Bellemade, Evansville, IN 47714.

Dr. Melvin "Mike" Denner, professor emeritus of biology, died Aug. 20 at his home in Evansville. He was 69.

Denner joined the USI faculty in 1968 and retired in 1995. He was a former division chair of both the Science and Math departments, received numerous teaching awards, and was named the state's Professor of the Year in 1988 by the National Council for the Advancement and Support of Education.

He held a B.S. from Upper Iowa University, a master's from University of Kentucky, and a Ph.D. from Iowa State University.

Survivors include his wife of 38 years, Anne Greer Denner, a former USI faculty member; two sons, Mark Denner and Michael Denner; a sister; two grandsons; and nieces and nephews. He was preceded in death by infant daughter Joy Ann.

A funeral mass was held Aug. 23 at St. Agnes Catholic Church in Evansville. Memorial contributions may be made to the Melvin Denner Health Professions Award through USI Foundation or to the Denner-Greer Russian Studies Enrichment Fund at Stetson University.

FYI

Children's programs

Pre-enroll now for children's summer and holiday programs at USI. Summer Enrichment Camp, the University's on-campus childcare program for kids in grades 1-3, will move to a new, smaller location next summer so space will be limited.

Pre-enrollment also is available for Kindergarten Camp, which is held during the summer months at the USI Children's Center and is open to kids entering or leaving kindergarten. The Holiday Care Program, now accepting pre-enrollment for fall semester holidays, offers care for school-age children on all holidays when the Evansville-Vanderburgh School Corp. is not in session during the academic year with the exception of USI's Winter Recess, December 22-January 2.

Space in each program is limited. For additional pre-enrollment information, call Ginger Ramsden, manager of Family, School, and Children's Programs in Extended Services, 812/464-1989, or Kathi Thurston, senior program assistant in Extended Services, 812/464-1989.

New number

Instructional Technology Services' main telephonic number has been changed from 812/464-1888 to 812/465-7182. For immediate technical assistance with audio-visual equipment or other technical services this fall, call the ITS technical help desk, 812/464-1838.

Newsletter deadline

Friday, September 8, is the deadline for submitting information for the next online issue of University Notes. Submissions received after the deadline will be published at the discretion of the editorial staff.

Submissions for the “Marketplace” column may be made via e-mail to Roberta Fugate, editorial associate in News and Information Services. Other submissions for University Notes may be made via e-mail to Libby L. Keeling, associate editor.

Volunteer opportunities

Jacob's Village

Jacob's Village, a new residential facility being built on the northwest side of Evansville, is a non-profit organization dedicated to enriching the lives of adults with developmental disabilities.

The organization is in need of volunteers to assist with landscaping. Volunteers will help plant trees (no digging required), rake, lay sod, and assist with other miscellaneous duties.

Jacob's Village would like a minimum of three volunteers to give one-half or a full day per weekend. The Saturday dates are: September 27; October 11, 18, 25; and November 1 and 8. For more information, call Trisha Kennedy, assistant director of Alumni and Volunteer Services, 812/465-1215.

Angel Mounds

Angel Mounds State Historic Site is seeking volunteers for its annual Native American Days celebration September 26-28. The event provides opportunities to experience the life of American Indians as well as contemporary Native American culture. Performances and demonstrations by skilled artists and craftspeople will be presented. Hands-on activities and a children's area also will be available.

Volunteers may assist with concessions, event sign-in, the children's area, at the gate, or as multi-task volunteers. Volunteering is a wonderful way to show support for both Angel Mounds and the community. For more information, call Trisha Kennedy, assistant director of Alumni and Volunteer Services, 812/465-1215.

Habitat Build Day

A Habitat Build Day for USI women is scheduled October 25 during the third annual Evansville Habitat Women Build. USI alumnae, staff, and students may volunteer to participate in the morning (8 a.m. to noon) or afternoon (noon to 4 p.m.) building sessions.

A blitz-style build to provide a single mother and four children a new home, Habitat's Women Build will be held October 11-November 8. In addition to USI, women's groups involved in the 2003 event include Integra Bank, First Federal Bank, Schnucks Foods, Vectren, Whirlpool, Women's Realtors, A I ibon Fellows Bacon Center, and Ivy Tech.

Skilled and unskilled volunteers age 16 or older are welcome to participate. Each volunteer will receive a complimentary t-shirt. To register, contact USI Alumni and Volunteer Services, 812/464-1924.
