University mourning educator, friend

A dedicated educator, insightful scholar, and loyal friend, Dr. Michael Dean Waitman, 57, Evansville, died April 27 at Deaconess Hospital after a long illness.

A native associate professor of English, he had taught undergraduate and graduate English and humanities courses at USI since 1968, including The Western Tradition in Humanities II, Masterpieces of English Literature II, Writings By and About John F. Kennedy, and The Psyche in Literature.

“Dr. Waitman was not only a good professor, but a good person. What more could any of us strive to be,” observed Colleen Corcoran, a senior majoring in English and history. “Somehow, knowing Dr. Waitman made you want to be better, to know more...

“I can recall calling him up once, frantically trying to decide the proverbial question of all students, ‘What should I do with my life,’ and Dr. Waitman took the time to help me find some direction. Whether sharing an anecdote about a film he had recently seen with his daughter or helping you outline a thesis, Dr. Waitman made his presence felt to the USI student community.”

Born in Evansville September 13, 1944, Waitman was a 1962 graduate of Rex Mundi High School. He received bachelor’s, master’s, and doctoral degrees in English literature from Saint Louis University and a master’s degree in religion from Vanderbilt University’s School of Divinity.

“Mike and I were both hired in 1968 and had offices next to each other in the old Centennial Building,” said Dr. Thomas Rivers, professor of English and director of the Master of Arts in Liberal Studies Program.

“He was three days younger than me, and we both had attended Catholic high school and a Catholic college as undergraduates. The friendship was immediate. Mike was always a loyal and generous friend, but forgiving of all those who were not. Mike’s friendship was a gift that all of us will miss.”

Waitman’s interests ranged from collegiate sports and the comedy, Seinfeld, to world literature and the study of religion.

“He was very versatile. He taught not only English courses but also humanities courses, and he taught in our Capstone Studies Program in the School of Liberal Arts,” commented Dr. John Gottcent, University Core coordinator and professor of English.

“The expression I hear people using is very short and sweet but kind of sums Mike up - a gentle soul... He was really beloved by the students.”

During his 34 years at USI, he served on numerous committees, including the University Student Affairs Committee, Personal Development Advisory Committee, and the USI Fulbright Award Nominating Committee. He served as faculty coordinator of the School of Liberal Arts Honors Convocation, chaired the School of Liberal Arts Scholarship Committee, participated in the Bonding Through Books Project, and was an advisor to English majors.

“One of the things that struck me about Michael was his impact on students who have long since graduated,” said Dr. Julia Galbus, director of Humanities and assistant professor of English.

“It’s not uncommon for me to bump into someone who took a general education class from Michael 20 years ago and loved it, even if their major was far outside the humanities. They remember his name long after they’ve forgotten other professors. That says a lot about the gracious and dedicated spirit of his teaching.”

He also was faculty co-sponsor of the Mu Phi Chapter of Sigma Tau Delta, the English honor society.

“I was constantly amazed at his determination, tenacity, and bravery,” said Bea Pentzer, a senior English major and member of Sigma Tau Delta. “He was always there, always going above and beyond the call, and always smiling... Even though I never had him for class, I cried like a baby at the news of his death. No one - ever - could take his place.”

A member of Corpus Christi Catholic Church, he served as a lector and Eucharistic minister and had been a member of the Education Commission. He had hoped to found a minor in religious studies at USI, where he was involved in campus ministry.

“Michael exemplified his serious commitment to his Christian faith. His dealings with colleagues and students were always dominated by his compassionate attitude toward his fellow humans. He was scrupulous about treating everyone fairly and truthfully, and he expected others to act responsibly,” said Dr. Walter Everett, professor of English.

“Aiso, Michael was very careful in making intellectual distinctions. He thought very clearly and pursued ideas to logical conclusions. For that I think his students and his colleagues held him in great respect. We will especially miss his insights into literature, student interests, and campus matters. Most of all, I think we will miss his sunny disposition, which often lightened our days.”

He is survived by his daughter, Grace Regina Waitman of Evansville; his mother, Maverine Waitman of Evansville; a brother and his wife, Frederick and Christine Waitman of Bridgeton, Mo.; and a niece, Amy E. Waitman, M.D., of Canfield, Ohio.

Memorial contributions may be made to the University of Southern Indiana Scholarship Fund, Riley Children’s Hospital, or the Corpus Christi Church Building Fund.

Services were held May 1 at Corpus Christi Catholic Church with burial in St. Joseph Cemetery.

“Dr. Waitman was a curious student’s dream come true. All a student had to do was drop by his office with a question or a comment, and Dr. Waitman would quite literally light up,” said Nathaniel Rivers, a junior majoring in English and psychology.

“There was a time I had a concern about a paper I was writing, and Dr. Waitman must have talked to me about it for an hour or so; and it wasn’t just an hour of me talking and Dr. Waitman politely nodding his head. You see, Dr. Waitman had a way of being a teacher and at the same time making students feel as if they were peers or colleagues of his. He will be greatly missed.”

Braysmith wins teaching award

Dr. Hilary Braysmith, associate professor of art history, has been named recipient of the 2002 H. Lee Cooper Core Curriculum Teaching Award. The formal presentation will take place at the all-University convocation in August at the beginning of the fall semester.

The award, focusing exclusively on teaching, honors a faculty member whose work in University Core courses has been especially creative and successful in furthering UCC goals.

In nominating Braysmith for the award, her colleague, Joan Kempf, assistant professor of graphic design, wrote:

“Dr. Braysmith [has a] commitment to introducing students to the high standards of university-level work and the goals of the core curriculum. She understands the student demographics and challenges her students to achieve personal as well as academic growth. Her classes set the stage for students to work hard and reach high academic levels.”

The H. Lee Cooper Core Curriculum Teaching Award is named for an Evansville philanthropist and long-time supporter of USI. It includes a $1,500 stipend plus additional funds available for faculty development.
A part of the award, Braysmith will make a presentation to the University community that relates to teaching or educational philosophy during the 2002-03 academic year.

EPO performing at Lincoln Amphitheatre

The Evansville Philharmonic Orchestra will open the 2002 Lincoln Amphitheatre season with “Celebrate America,” a concert at 7:30 p.m. May 26.

Performing under the direction of Alfred Savia, Evansville’s professional musicians will play some of America’s most beloved music in a setting that combines the beauty of the great outdoors with the comfort of covered seating.

The program will include excerpts from Rodgers and Hammerstein’s The Sound of Music and Aaron Copland’s A Lincoln Portrait as well as patriotic, jazz, Broadway, and light classical selections.

Jordan Greenberg, violinist and winner of the 2002 Young Artists competition, will be a featured soloist, and vocalists Jennifer Hampson, Maria Campos, and Kenneth Halcom will have solos in The Sound of Music. Mike Blake of W FIE-TV will serve as narrator for A Lincoln Portrait.

According to Savia, the end of the concert will combine the stirring music of Aaron Copland with Lincoln’s inspiring words building to a “goose bump filled” finale with a musical salute to all branches of the Armed Forces and a beautiful arrangement of “God Bless America,” which the audience will be invited to sing.

“Ever since I came to Evansville 13 years ago, I have thought that a concert at Lincoln Amphitheatre is something the orchestra must do. My wife Kitty and I took our kids, who were then truly kids, to one of the Young Abe Lincoln performances our first summer here. In addition to being impressed by the high-level production, I was overwhelmed by the amphitheatre and its setting in the beautiful woods of Lincoln State Park,” Savia said.

“I have been back many times since in the past two summers to see my older daughter on stage as a performer in the shows. It is truly one of the very best outdoor facilities I have ever seen.”

The philharmonic is partnering with USI to stage the patriotic concert on Memorial Day weekend. Sponsors include Ameritech Electric Power, Perry-Spencer Communications Inc., and Price-Collins, LLP.

“With the ‘Celebrate America’ concert we intend to introduce the orchestra and Lincoln Amphitheatre to an audience who may not know either or to reintroduce both to people who have not seen a performance for some time,” said Dr. Iain Crawford, dean of the School of Liberal Arts and amphitheatre co-producer.

“It also is an opportunity to celebrate America and our national values on this opening weekend of the summer.”

Tickets, $10, $15, $25 for adults and $5 for children, go on sale Friday, May 3, at The Evansville Philharmonic Orchestra Ticket Office, 812/425-5050. Tickets also will be available at the door, but reservations are recommended.

Lincoln Amphitheatre is located in Lincoln State Park in Lincoln City, Ind. Established to tell the story of Abraham Lincoln’s childhood and young adult years in Indiana, the amphitheatre will stage the musical historical drama, Young Abe Lincoln, opening Friday, June 21, and The Sound of Music, opening Saturday, July 6.

Parking is free, but there is a $4 per vehicle charge to enter the park. More information about Lincoln Amphitheatre is available online: www.lincoln-amphitheatre.com.

SBC supporting USI online institute

Faculty invited to guest presentations

The SBC Foundation is helping underwrite the cost of a summer institute for faculty at USI with a grant of $58,280.

The Institute for Online Teaching and Learning assists faculty developing and implementing online courses that are part of the University’s Core Curriculum or a school/department’s distance education development plan.

The 2002 institute will begin May 13 with an intensive two-week training program and will continue throughout the 2002-03 academic year.

“We are pleased to support a program that provides additional learning opportunities to educators through the use of advanced technology. This is an investment in progress and SBC Ameritech commends University leadership for pursuing this important initiative,” said Rick Borries, director of SBC Ameritech’s External Affairs for Southwestern Indiana.

An objective of the 2002 institute is to implement 14 online courses in the next academic year, according to Dr. Karen Bonnell, director of Instructional Technology Services.

Institute participants are selected through a competitive process of course proposal review. Faculty participating in the 2002 institute include:

- Dr. Iris Phillips, assistant professor of social work
- Dr. Jennifer Williams, associate professor of computer information systems
- Dr. Mehmet C. Kocakulah, professor of accounting
- Dr. Rebecca Wisnant, assistant professor philosophy
- Dr. Thomas E. Rivers, professor of English
- Dr. David E. Schultz, assistant professor of electrical engineering technology
- Margaret Felton, instructor of psychology
- Claudine Bentley Fairchild, instructor of radiologic technology
- Kevin Valaderes, assistant professor of health services/administration
- Dr. Karl L. Larson, assistant professor of physical education
- Rohn Butterfield, instructor in health services
A n estimated 2,800 students will benefit from online learning at USI in the coming academic year.

The SBC Foundation is the core of SBC’s charitable involvement and is committed to using its resources to strengthen the communities where SBC employees live and work.

The 2002 Summer Institute for Online Teaching and Learning will host two guest presentations May 13 and 14, and all interested faculty are invited to attend.

Dr. Stephen C. Ehrmann, vice president of the Teaching, Learning, and Technology Group and director of the Flashlight Program, will speak from 9:15 to 10:30 a.m. May 13 in the University Center’s Carter Hall.

Ehrmann is one of the founders of the TLT Group, and for more than 25 years he has helped educators improve teaching and learning. Since 1993, he has directed the Flashlight Program, which helps educators evaluate and improve their own uses of technology. The program is perhaps best known for its award-winning tools for developing evaluative studies.

Well-known in the field of distance education, Ehrmann served as a program officer with Annenberg/CPB from 1985 to 1996, when he funded innovative research and materials in the field. He also previously worked as a program officer with The Fund for the Improvement of Education and as director of Educational Research and Assistance at Evergreen State College.

Ehrmann has spoken about the uses and abuses of technology on hundreds of campuses around the world. He has written or helped write four books and more than 30 articles on subjects as varied as the economics of courseware and the role of designing in the curriculum. Many of his articles can be found in the “Resources” section of the TLT Group’s Web site: http://www.tlt-group.org.

“Copyright and Intellectual Property” will be the topic of a question-and-answer forum presented by the Indiana Higher Education Telecommunications System from 10 a.m. to noon May 14 in Room 1027 of the Health Professions Center.

The forum offers an opportunity to ask questions concerning distance education course copyright and intellectual property and to discuss these complex and timely issues with the experts.

Reservations are not required for the presentations.

The 2002 Summer Institute for Online Teaching and Learning is sponsored by the Center for Teaching and Learning Excellence and Instructional Technology Services.

The University will host a photo identification program presented by historian Kenneth D. Wilson at 2 p.m. May 18 at the Mount Vernon Public Library. A Mount Vernon native, Wilson is curator of the Evansville Regional Airport Aviavision Archives.

Facilitated by Gina Walker, library associate, the John Wagner Doane Photographic Collection program is being presented as a requirement of an Indiana Heritage Research Grant from the Indiana Humanities Council.

The Doane Collection in the USI Special Collections/University Archives Department consists of negatives and photographs taken in Mount Vernon and Posey County 1910-1960. The collection includes scenes of buildings, the countryside, the petroleum industry, fires, and floods.

Doane opened the Mount Vernon Airport in 1946, was a photographer with the Mount Vernon Democrat and United Press International, Chicago, and owned a photography studio in Mount Vernon. His work led him to photograph people and events in areas of southern Indiana, Illinois, and Kentucky.

Doane died in 1972. In 1973, Mrs. Anne Doane donated the collection to the University.

The public is invited to attend and assist in identifying photographic subjects.

Chamber Choir touring Ireland

The USI Chamber Choir will embark on its fourth European tour with a trip to Ireland in May.

Performing under the direction of Daniel R. Craig, assistant professor of music, the choir will travel to Chicago May 6 for a direct flight to Dublin and seven days of singing and touring castles and cathedrals.

While in Ireland, the group will present an eclectic collection of fine choral music covering almost every period of music history while performing in some of the most inspiring concert settings in the country: St. Patrick’s Cathedral, Dublin; St. Colman’s Cathedral, Cobh; the Augustinian Church of Limerick; and St. Maelruains Church of Ireland, Dublin.

In Limerick, the choir will perform for the DORAS organization, a group that sponsors refugees from Bosnia and other troubled areas of the world.

The choir also will have opportunities to tour the Irish National Museum, Christ Church Cathedral, Burren Castle, Bunratty Castle, King John’s Castle, and the Cliffs of Moher.

The USI Chamber Choir is an auditioned ensemble offering two hours of course credit.

At the invitation of The Association of Fund Raising Professionals, David A. Bower, C.F.R.E., associate director of University Development, taught a survey course on fund raising in Nashville, Tenn., in March. The association is an international organization for those involved in full-time fund development. The Certified Fund Raising Executive (C.F.R.E.) program is a practice-based certification program for which fewer than 10 percent of all full-time development professionals qualify. Bower received his certification in 1999. He is a member of both the Association of Fund Raising Professionals and the National Committee on Planned Giving.

Dr. Hilary Braysmith, associate professor of art history, joined 30 faculty from across the nation at “Images of Authority in Asian Art and Literature,” a National Endowment for the Humanities workshop, earlier this month at the University of Oklahoma in Norman, Okla. She also was a panelist for “Women Sustaining the American Spirit” at the National Endowment for the Humanities annual retreat in New Harmony.

Dr. Sherry Bevins Darrell, professor of English, presented a paper on Shakespeare’s asides at the International Comparative Drama Conference at Ohio State University earlier this month. On May 11, she will present the Shakespeare workshop, “Why Are You Still Teaching Tragedies?,” for the humanities teaching faculty during its annual retreat in New Harmony.

A native of Chicago, she earned undergraduate and graduate degrees in romance languages and secondary education at University of Chicago and later was awarded certificates in library science from University of Evansville and Indiana State University.

She moved to New Harmony in 1942 with her husband John to live on his family's farm. Her husband served as an adjunct instructor of anthropology and archaeology at USI, and together they were founding members of Harmonie Associates and active in the Golden Raintree Association.

Her memberships also included the Indiana and American Societies of Archivists, National Historic Communal Societies Association, and Indiana Oral History Roundtable.

She was preceded in death by her husband June 6, 2001.

Survivors include her daughter and son-in-law, Claudia M. (Elliott) Jeffrey and John Jeffrey of Chicago; and two grandsons.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Saturday, May 4, at The Barn A bby in New Harmony with burial in Maple Hill Cemetery. Dr. Donald Pitzer, director of USI’s Center for Communal Studies, and Father Earl Roderer will officiate.

Friends may call from 3 to 7 p.m. Friday, May 3, at Werry Funeral Home New Harmony Chapel and from 1 p.m. to service time at The Barn A bby.

Memorial contributions may be made to University of Southern Indiana or University of Chicago.

Kenneth Dale Owen

Kenneth Dale Owen, 98, New Harmony, died April 28 at his home in the town where his great-great-grandfather, Robert Owen, established a utopian community in 1825.

A geologist, farmer, horseman, historical preservationist, and philanthropist, Owen played a vital role in the restoration of the Rapp Granary. He and Dr. David Rice, USI president emeritus, received the Outstanding Preservation Award of Indiana from the State Department of Natural Resources for their efforts as well as the Year 2000 American Institute of Architects Indiana Design Honor Award in Preservation.

Owen also built and restored the David Dale Owen Laboratory, which was his New Harmony home, and the Rapp-Macleure-Owen Mansion. In 1987, he received an honorary Doctor of Science from USI.

A graduate of Cornell University, Owen began his career as a field geologist for The Humble Oil Co. in Houston, Texas, became State Surveyor of Texas, and formed two companies, Gulfshore Oil Co. and Trans-Tex Production Co.

Although he established a home in Houston, he always remembered his home of New Harmony, where he worked to reclaim properties originally owned by his ancestors, and where he raised his cattle-breeding, and farming operations. For years, he also owned a horse breeding farm in Pennsylvania.

He was a member and vice chair of the New Harmony Memorial Commission and was a founding member of the New Lanark Association, Ltd., in Scotland. He also was a member of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, a Legion of Honor member of the Society of Petroleum Engineers of the American Institute of Mining Engineers, The American Petroleum Institute, and The Houston Geological Society.

He was an emeritus member of the Cornell University Council and the Equine Advisory Council of the New York State College of Veterinary Medicine. He also was appointed Tennessee Ambassador of Goodwill by Gov. Don Sundquist, commissioned a Colonel by the State of Kentucky, and awarded...
Indiana's highest honor as a Sagamore of the Wabash by Gov. Frank O'Bannon.

He was married to Jane Blaffer of Houston, Texas, for 61 years and was the father of three daughters, Jane Dale Owen, Anne Dale Owen, and the late Caroline Owen Coleman, who died in 1979. He also is survived by four grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

A private funeral was held in New Harmony May 2 with internment in Maple Hill Cemetery.

Memorials may be sent to the Owen-Maclure Foundation, 5120 Woodway, Suite 9007, Houston, Texas 77056 or the Rapp Granary-Owen Foundation of New Harmony Indiana.
